to prowl about robbing and destroying, is rather too infamous to be tolerated. If such a system is inaugurated, it will be crushed out. We have no hesitation about coercing, subjugating or exterminating men who engage in such crimes. They are no better than common highwaymen, and deserve the same fate. Whilst armies are in the field, and the rebellion has a show of revolution, those engaged in it are entitled to belligerent rights, according to the practice of nations. It must be admitted that the Government has construed these rights in behalf of the rebels in the most liberal manner. It is amusing to hear the rebels com clain that the President has suspended the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, whilst they don't complain that he has suspended the law punishing treason with death. He treats treason as prisoners of war. These rebel sympathisers do not complain of that.

Having made the largest allowance for belligerent rights, we need not be expected to tolerate mere bands of robbers; and it is well that all parties should understand it. Such men are not entitled to the protection of the laws of war, and if not summarily treated as other robbers and marauders, they may consider themselves exempt from the extreme measure of their deserts by Those who sympathise with these marauders, or give them aid and comfort, may expect to pay the expense of their exploits. No community can be expected to tolerate such a mode of warfare. It must be put down, however sharp the practice necessary to effect the purpose.

The Abolitionists are clamorous for the President to define his policy. They want a policy: the intensified of them. We had desired ourselves something more definite from Abraham Lincoln; but since some of the intensified are eager that the Presi dent should commit himself, we advise him ot to do it. These radicals have an uner ring instinct for the wrong, and their call for a policy is an error. In these troublesome times a President had better wait un til the case is before him before he decides it. Sunday Night's Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, June 1. The following dispatch was received a he War Department this evening:

FIELD OF BATTLE, June 1-12 M. We have had a desperate battle, in which the corps of Gens. Sumner, Heintzleman, and Keys were engaged against greatly superior numbers. Yesterday at one o'clock the enemy, taking advantage of the terrible storm which flooded the valley of the Chickahominy, attacked our right flank. Gen. Casey's division, which was in the front line, gave way unaccountably. This caused temporary confusion, during which the guns and baggage were lost. But Heintzleman and Kearney most gallantly brought up their troops, which checked the enemy, and at the same time I succeeded by great exertion in bringing across Gens. Sedgwick's and Richardson's divisions, who drove back the enemy at the point of the bayonet, covering the ground with his dead. This morning the enemy attempted to renew the conflct, but were everywhere repulsed. We have taken many prisoners, among whom is Gen. Pettigrew and Col. Long. Our loss is heavy, but the enemy's must be enormous Excepting Casey's division the men behaved splendidly. Several fine bayonet charges

It gives me great pleasure to report the Colonel Elliott, which I sent out on the 28th inst. The Second Iowa Cavalry, after forced marches day and night, through a very difficult country, and obstructed by the enemy, finally succeeded in reaching the Mobile and Ohio railroad at Boonesville. At two o'clock in the morning, of the 30th, he de-stroyed the track in many places both north and south of the town, blew up one culvert, lestroyed the switches and track, burned up the depot and locomotives, and a train of wenty-six cars, loaded with supplies of very kind, destroyed ten thousand stand of small arms, three pieces of artillery, a great quantity of clothing and ammunition, and paroled two thousand prisoners, who could not keep up with his cavalry. The enemy had heard of his movements, and had a train of box and flat cars of flying artillery and five thousand infantry running up and down the road to prevent him from reaching it. several days Colonel Elliott's command subsisted upon meat alone, such as they could find in the country.

For daring and dispatch this expedition has been distinguished in the highest degree, and entitles Colonel Elliott and his command to high distinction. Its results will be embarrassing to the enemy, and contribute greatly to their loss and demoralization. He eports the roads full of small parties of the retreating enemy, scattering in all direc-tions. John Pope, Maj. Gen.

Our loss was 8 killed, 4 wounded and 1 missing, all of the Rhode Island cavalry. We captured 6 officers and 150 privates. #### Battle at Russell's House. REPORT OF GENERAL SHERMAN.

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH DIVISION. CAMP BEFORE CORINTH, May 19, 1862. Capt. George E. Flint, Assistant Adjutan General, Chief of Gen. Thomas' Staff:

General, Chief of Gen. Thomas Staff.

Sir: I have the honor to report that in compliance with the purpose of Maj. Gen. Halleck, as explained at the interview of the 16th inst., Gen. Thomas being present, I made all possible inquiry as to the toography of the ground in my front, with its water courses, fields and roads, and on the 17th made discretified. 17th made dispositions to drive the enem from his position at Russell's house.
I requested Gen. Hurlbut to put in motion 3 P. M., on the road which passes the front of his line and runs to Russell's house. I ordered Gen. Denver to take a right hand road with two regiments of his brigade and a battery of light artiflery, viz: the 70th and 72d Ohio and Barrett's battery, and gave him a guide, so to conduct his march as to arrive on the left of the enemy's front; and I ordered Gen. Morgan L. Smith's brigade with Bouton's battery to follow the main road, drive back a brigade of the enemy's forces that held the position Russell's with their skirmishers and pickets down to the causeway and bridge across a small stream, about eight hundred yards this side of Russell's house, supposed to be branch of Bride creek.

All these forces were put in motion at three o'clock P. M., General Denver's forces taking the right hand road, and General Smith's the direct main rod. On reaching the causeway General Smith deployed his vance guard. The column advanced and the skirmishers became engaged at once. firing was very brisk, but the enemy's park ets were driven steadily back till they reached the position of their brigade, at Russell's house, where their resistance was obstinate. The ground was unfavorable to artillery till the skirmishers had cleared the hill beyond the causeway, when Major Tay-lor, Chief of Artillery, advanced first one of Bouton's guns, and very soon after the re-maining three guns of the battery. These, Denver's column reached its position as the enemy was beginning to retreat.

advance of his brigade handsomely, and the chief work and loss fell upon his two lead-ing regiments, the Eighth Missouri and Fifty-fifth Illinois. I leave to him the full credit of conducting the advance, and of carrying the position at Russell's. He held the ground till about daylight the next morning, when, by my order, he left a strong picket there and placed his brigade back a short distance, in easy support, where it remained till relieved by another

From Russell's we could hear distinctly the drums beating in Corinth. The house is nearly two miles from me, and about one and a quarter miles from the enemy's outer intrenchments; and the position, though ent. General Hurlbut has two companies at Russell's and two regiments along the edge of a field which lies to the east of Russtation in our front, and I have a chain of sentinels round by the right to a point on the Purdy and Corinth road, where it joins on to the pickets of Gen. McClernand. There was no loss sustained by General Hurlbut or Denver's commands, in their flank movement on Russell's, but the loss in General Morgan L. Smith's brigade was Lieut. Frank C. A correspondent, writing from McClellan's

Another cause of delay is the necessit of frequently stopping the march to build bridges for the wagons across creeks and rivulets, which the rebels seem to have burned even in places where the want of them could not stop us for an hour. This bridge-building is a curious work, and proceeds with great rapidity when so large noment's notice. We were stopped at an early hour by the burning of a small bridge, across Black creek, on a side road, where it was of little consequence, but which it was deemed advisable to replace, that every wagon road might be made available. The span was scarcely twenty-five feet, and as soon as the pioneers came up, one hundred men were in the woods looking for pine trees. At about twenty rods from the stream they found a grove of good, straight pines, and soon had four of them down. Then fifty men caught up one of the heavy trunks and bore it to the stream, where a gang of men, with spades and shovels, had brought up and were laid, and spikes driven in in a workmanlike manner. Another company was busy bringing rails from a fence near by, with which to roy road from the bridge to the main road, and in a couple of hours the burned bridge had been replaced by a better and more substantial structure than before, and trains were passing over it.

It is a simple thing this building a bridge, and the army builds one almost daily, but Advices from Arkansas say one rebel gunboat and several steamboats are reported at Little Rock. The gunboat shelled a rebel camp under the impression that it was occupied by the Federals, wounding several rebels and scattering the whole garrison.

Union troops had driven the rebels fifteen miles beyond Little Red river, and General Curtis' cavalry have scattered the enemy in the front and flank, killing 18 or 20 of them.

DESCRIPTION OF THE "LOUISVILLE REAPER."

THIS MACHINE WEIGHS 500 POUNDS, CUTS 64 FERC WIDE, AND FROM 4 TO 24 INCHES HIGH. IT IS OF LIGHT DRAFT, AND WITHOUT APPARENT side-draft. If will cut; under favorable circumstances, from 15 to 25 acres per day. There is no driver's seat on the Machine; this lessess the weight, and leaves all the gearing and boxes convenient for ciling or adjusting. The driver rile's the horse on the opposite side from the cutters, and is in no danger of being run over, should need accidentally fall. The graring is all secured in an iron fram '; the brarils are ions and secure from dirt. With care this part of the Machine will last for many years. The high-cut of the "Louisville Reaper" saves the bandling of a large portion of the heaviest part of the straw, and the forker lays off the strain in perfect bundles, about a soon the ordinary low-cut Machines, which are not capable of doing over one-half the amount of work per day. The change from lowest to highest cut can be made to the control of the strain in the proposition of the heavier part of the straw, and the forker lays off the strain to perfect bundles, about a superior of the layer of the straw and the forker lays off the strain to perfect bundles, about a superior of the layer of the straw and the forker lays off the strain to perfect bundles, about the ordinary low-cut Machines, which are not capable of doing over one-half the amount of work per day. The change from lowest to highest cut can be made the strain that the amount of work per day. The change from lowest to highest cut can be made to the strain to the strain the superior of work per day.

STITULE PRICE. LOUISVILLE MOWER."

DESORIPTION OF THE "LOUISVILLE MOWER."

THIS MACHINE IS MADE ALMOST ENTIRELY OF IRON; IT IS EXCERDINGLY COMPACT AND SIMPLE, AND STRONG BEYOND ANY POSSIBILITY OF breaking. It cuts a swain 4 feet 4 inches wide, and cuts even and smooth in all kinds of grass. It has a lever for raising the finger-bar from the ground for passing betructions, or for moving from field to field. It is arranged to throw itself out of gear when backing, and is convenient to handle in every respect. It weighs about 500 sounds, which is heavier than several of the newly invented Machines, but none too heavy, we think, to stand the rough and careless usage to which all Mowers are ubject. The tongue is loose, and there is no weight on the horses' neck.

Office of Kentucky Agricultural Works, Market Street, between Preston and Jackson. We commenced the manufacture of Harvesters last season, with the belief that we could furnish Machines better suited to the wants of our Farmers than any ready introduced. Our plan is to make separate, not combined, Machines; when made for the special purpose, they can be simple, cheap, and durable, while combined are necessarily complex and costly, and generally, after one season's use, out of order. We made but few Machines for last harvest, but those, so far as heard from roomed well, as the certificates which we offer in our descriptive circular, for in those who have had experience with Harvesters, will show. Circulars mailed free upon
